A major operation, accident or illness will have resulted in your loved-one being admitted to Intensive Care Unit (ICU). This is because their body needs special help to sustain and attain the normal physiological parameters.

Here we provide information and explain as to why there are certain rules and restrictions you are expected to follow when you visit your loved-one/s admitted in the ICU.

Visitor's pass is compulsory and you can visit only during visiting hours

This maintains security of the patient, prevents overcrowding, infections, and interruptions in the normal routine care and information exchange.

Remove your shoes/slippers outside the ICU

It reduces the dirt that transfers from your shoes to the ICU floors limiting spread of infection

Do not visit if you don't feel well yourself

If you have cold, sore throat, or any contagious diseases, do not visit patients as it may cause infection to the patient and also makes you more vulnerable to infections.

Wash hands or use sterilizer before & after touching the patients

This is the single most important step to prevent infections as per WHO guidelines.

Children below 12 years of age are not permitted

Children are more vulnerable to infection and may bring in or take it out from the premises. In unavoidable cases, prior permission from the ICU staff/doctors is needed.

Keep the premises clean and do not damage hospital property

The premises and facilities are dedicated to the well-being of the patients, you never know who may need them next!

Visitors and family members should designate one spokesperson to ask the staff/doctors for updates

This saves the staff's time and also maintains privacy of the patient's treatment details.

Each case is different

In case of any confusion, please consult the primary consultant and do not compare the treatment with other cases. Each case is different from the diagnosis, treatment, and outcome point of view.

Keep the messages comforting

Talk about positive things. Avoid saying anything negative.

Keep your ICU visits short

The suggested maximum visit time is 15 to 20 minutes. This prevents overcrowding, infections, and interruptions in the normal routine care and information exchange.

Don't bring your "business" into the hospital visit

Make all necessary personal and/or business phone calls/messages before or after the visit.

Visitors of patients are advised to take food in the visitor's cafeteria only

This helps in ascertaining the cleanliness of the premises.
